Justices of the Indiana Supreme Court, a 467-page volume is now available from the Indiana Historical Society Press. Edited by Linda C. Gugin and James E. St. Clair, it examines the lives of the 106 men and women who have sat on the state's highest court. The book includes an introduction by the Chief Justice of the United States, John G. Roberts Jr.

With 72 authors, the book captures details of the lives of the self-taught, circuit riding judges from the early days of statehood through the 21st century Justices now serving on the Court. Photographs, including those from previously unpublished family collections, complete the edition.
